2019 Biodiesel Seminar Tour Announced

JEFFERSON CITY, MO—The National Biodiesel Board has announced the roll out of its second annual Exploring Biodiesel (XBX) series, a touring seminar designed to educate diesel fuel distributors and end users on the benefits and opportunities surrounding biodiesel.

Organizers say that this year's series of four events, which is again being offered complimentary to attendees, will examine biodiesel's growing prominence in the liquid fuels supply chain. In the wider context of today's advanced, high-efficiency OEM technologies, and the increasingly ultra-low-sulfur diesel supply pool, the seminars will call attention to biodiesel's downstream operability and marketability as a carbon-neutral, renewable fuel that's cost and energy efficient, broadly adoptable, and increasingly needed across all sectors in today's anti-carbon regulatory climate. From both technical and practical standpoints, attendees will learn how biodiesel is being utilized in the 21st century energy landscape, and how it can provide a valuable lifeline for diesel fuel distributors and end users facing a wave of carbon-neutral policies on the horizon.

“With carbon metrics increasingly driving diesel markets, you won't want to miss this opportunity to dive deep into the latest information on biodiesel use for the full spectrum of industry stakeholders,” said Kevin Kuper, Finished Products Manager for SeSequential, a Portland, Oregon-based biodiesel wholesaler.

XBX organizer Paul Nazzaro, petroleum liaison for NBB, says the event is aimed at suppliers and end-users of diesel fuel who are interested in the operational, environmental, and cost benefits of biodiesel, and in learning how this market-ready, carbon-neutral fuel can empower their organizations as state and federal carbon reduction policies take effect over the next 10 to 30 years.
